Possible Federal Sources of Assistance to Federally Assisted Programs or Activities

Why Is It Necessary to Determine If There is Federal Assistance
In order to determine whether Title VI, Title IX, and other grant related nondiscirmination statutes apply to the programs or activities of an entity, it must be determined whether the entity is a recipient of federal financial assistance. It is also necessary to determine which federal agencies fund an entity believed to be discriminating to determine which federal agency or agencies complaints should be sent to.

Possible Sources of Federal Assistance to Recipients
The Agency-Recipient Overlap chart below lists the 30 federal agencies that provide federal financial assistance and the types of entities that they fund. (Acronyms are written out in the Agency Key following the chart). Federal agencies can use the chart to coordinate compliance efforts when entities that they fund (i.e., recipients) are also funded by another federal agency. Community organizations and individuals who are beneficiaries of assistance can use the chart to determine where complaints of discrimination can be filed.

Agency-Recipient Overlap Chart (PDF or HTML)

In addition, recipients must report grants received from the federal government pursuant to the Single Audit Act and OMB Circular 133. This data base is searchable by entity and yields information about specific grants and grant amounts received, among other things. This data base can be accessed by going to: http://harvester.census.gov/sac/dissem/entity.html |

About the Program
Speaking Together: National Language Services Network (NLSN) is a new Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) national program that will support hospitals to improve the quality and availability of health care language services for patients with limited English proficiency (LEP). Speaking Together: National Language Services Network has four goals:

• To improve communication between patients with LEP and their health care providers.
• To work in partnership with hospitals to develop models of high-quality language services.
• To develop useful measures in the area of language services to enable hospitals to conduct ongoing measurement of effectiveness and create performance benchmarks.
• To encourage the spread of successful strategies to increase language services within and across hospitals and health systems.

The core component of Speaking Together: National Language Services Network is a 16-month-long hospital learning collaborative that will foster shared learning and innovation among all program participants. Sites selected to participate in the collaborative will receive grants of up to $60,000, as well as technical assistance and training using measures developed by the National Program Office (NPO). The George Washington University Medical Center will serve as the NPO for this program.

Eligible sites are non-federal, general acute-care hospitals that have a minimum of 10,000 discharges per year and serve substantial numbers of patients with LEP. Hospitals must currently be operating a language services program that involves on-site professional interpreter(s). Eligibility is not contingent upon the language(s) spoken by the patients served at the hospital.

For more information about this program and how to apply to become one of the 10 selected grantees, please click here to view the Call for Proposals for Speaking Together: National Language Services Network. If you do not have Adobe Acrobat Reader, download it free here.

How to Apply
Applicants interested in the Speaking Together: National Language Services Network program must submit a full proposal through the RWJF Grantmaking Online Web page. The full proposal form, complete program information, and details about the proposal process are all available through the RWJF Grantmaking Online Web site: http://grantmaking.rwjf.org/dcc Applicants must submit full proposals electronically no later than 3 p.m. EST on April 26, 2006.

We will select some applicants for site visits during the proposal review process. Applicants will be asked to indicate their preferences for site visit dates during the online application process. A list of tentative dates is listed in the online proposal. Those selected for site visits will be notified by June 23, 2006. Site visits will be completed by August 4, 2006.

Access Fund Grant Information

The Legal Foundation of Washington's Access Fund Grant Program makes available one-time grants up to $2,000 to programs that provide civil legal aid to low income people in Washington State.
Access Fund grants are available to support projects that will address language-related barriers to civil legal aid. Eligible projects include, but are not limited to: translation of educational materials, hiring interpreter services, and training volunteer interpreters.
Access Fund applications may be made to the Foundation at any time.
However, because funds are limited it is best to apply early in the calendar year as funds may be depleted before year's end. Grant funds must be utilized in the calendar year in which they are awarded.

To Apply for an Access Fund Grant

Submit a letter of application to the Foundation's Grants Manager, not to exceed three pages, that provides the following information:

- A brief description of the applicant organization
- The purpose and nature of the proposed project, including a time frame for accomplishment of the work
- The benefits to be derived from the project
- If translation or interpretation services are proposed, a description of how the applicant organization will ensure high-quality services.

Attach to the letter of application:

- A list of board members
- A budget form

Grant applicants will be notified in writing of the Foundation's decision.
